The purpose of the IPR protection system is to encourage inventions and creation by protecting and exploiting inventions and creations, thus contributing to the development of industry. Such inventions and creations become intellectual property that is freely available to the public as part of the public domain after a certain period of protection has elapsed. “Propatent (patent emphasis) policy” has been formulated mainly in developed countries. In response, international litigation businesses are becoming more and more active, and “I didn't know” is no longer a sufficient defense. Rather, it is necessary to actively use the various systems related to propatents. This course aims to give students an understanding of the basic concepts of the intellectual property protection system, international trends, and Japan's position within this regime. Furthermore, the class will present an overview of important lawsuits to give students an awareness of legal compliance so they can cultivate an attitude of being willing to actively utilize the intellectual property protection system.
